The rate of shrinking of 30.2 km. long Gangotri Glacier in the last three decades has been found to be more than the rate during the earlier decades. Range of recession for this period is about 18-25 meter/year. Wadia Institute of Himalayan Geology (WIHG) is studying the melting of Himalayan Glaciers in the Garhwal Himalaya, namely, Dokriani and Chorabari glaciers. The Dokriani and Chorabari glacier have been receding at an average rate of 17.5 m/year between 1991 and 2005, and 10m/year between 2003 and 2006 respectively.

The major part of the river discharge is contributed by snowfall and precipitation which is likely to change with global warming. The continuous retreat of glaciers may lead to marginal shortage of water in the Himalayan Rivers.

(d) In additional to the above, the National Action Plan on Climate Change (NAPCC) envisages launching a Mission for sustaining the Himalayan Eco-system to evolve management measures for sustaining and safeguarding the Himalayan glaciers and mountain eco-system. The Mission is expected to seek to understand, whether and the extent to which, the Himalayan glaciers are in recession and how the problem could be addressed.
